

A close-up photograph of the Martian surface, showing a mix of reddish-brown soil and small, light-colored rocks. The texture is granular and uneven, with some larger, more angular rocks scattered throughout. The lighting is bright, highlighting the fine details of the soil and the mineral composition of the rocks.

Curiosity's first year of exploration on Mars

Dr. John Grotzinger - Project Scientist, Curiosity
Fletcher Jones Professor, Caltech

Tuesday, October 8, 2013 - 4:00 P.M.
Brown University - MacMillan 117